CSU Election Administrator Declaration of Election Emergency

The CSU Elections Procedures state that I, as Elections Administrator, “must transmit the official results of the election to the board of directors” within ten business days of the release of the preliminary results.

However, given the number of complaints and various pieces of evidence that have been provided to me since the election, including even today, I feel I need a few more days to properly investigate the matters before me and provide written decisions and appeals on these matters to best uphold the values of Independent Administration, Integrity, and Fairness (as stated in the Elections Policy).

This authority to declare an election emergency is solely for the purposes of suspending the 10 business day requirement with regard to transmitting the official results of the election to the board of directors.

Best,
